

International Conference on

“The Russo-Ukrainian War and European Security”

This international conference aims to explore the far-reaching implications of the Russo-Ukrainian War on European security and global stability. As the conflict continues to reshape political, military, and economic landscapes across Europe and beyond, experts from various disciplines will gather to analyze its impact on defense strategies, geopolitical alliances, and regional security architecture. The event will feature keynote addresses, panel discussions, and research presentations from leading academics, policymakers, and practitioners, offering insights into how this war is influencing European Union policies, NATO’s role, and broader global security dynamics.

The conference provides a platform for robust dialogue, fostering collaboration among stakeholders committed to understanding the evolving security challenges and developing strategies to address them in a rapidly changing world.
